Abstract: The emergence of Covid-19 has had a major impact on all aspects of life, including the world of education, namely the disruption of the learning process, due to calls for social distancing. Based on these conditions, the Minister of Education and Culture (Mendikbud) issued Circular Number 4 of 2020 regarding online learning. Online learning or learning from home requires more attention from parents in providing assistance and helping to prepare children's equipment. This study aims to find out (a) what forms of assistance are provided by parents, (2) how children's learning assistance works for working parents, (3) the factors that influence parental assistance to children in the online learning process. This research is a qualitative research, using a descriptive approach. Targets and informants in this study are parents of students. Collection of data taken through interviews. The results of the study show that (1) the assistance provided by parents at home in the online learning process is: (a) as a teacher, (b) as a facilitator. (2) Children where both parents have jobs cannot provide assistance and the solution that parents do so that children are still supervised is to entrust them to the closest family at home, for children whose parents are only working fathers, mentoring done by mother. (3) the influencing factors are: (a) parents' patience factor, (b) parents' wisdom factor and (3) parents' economic factor.
